

THE 2018 ETIENNE GILSON LECTURE

Pontifical Institute of Mediaeval Studies

Recent years have witnessed an increase in scholarly publications and research projects dedicated to the everyday and intellectual exchanges between Jews and Christians in medieval Europe. The contribution of Jewish texts to Christian exegesis, as well as to the sciences and the arts, is now well documented. This lecture revisits an important, if little studied question: how exactly did Christian readers access Hebrew texts? In particular, it provides an overview of and new evidence for the Christian study of the Hebrew language.

JUDITH OLSZOWY-SCHLANGER received her doctorate from the University of Cambridge in 1995 and is currently Directeur d'études, Manuscrits hébreux et judéo-arabes médiévaux, at the École Pratique des Hautes Études, as well as head of the Hebrew section at the Institut de recherche et d'histoire des textes in Paris. In 2016, she was elected a Corresponding Fellow of the British Academy.
